We inform you that the on-line “Training course for safety in chemical and biological laboratories” for people exposed to chemical and or biological risk due to University of Eastern Piedmont activities is available.

The course is to be carried out as a legal obligation and is essential to operate safely, being aware of the various rules governing these activities.

For any difficulties regarding the course, if any additional information is needed, you can refer to your tutor or contact directly Valerio Marinucci (prevsic@uniupo.it).

Targets

The course aims to provide useful information for a correct and safe approach to University laboratory activities, in which dangerous substances or biological agents are used.

- Start the Course by following the instructions on the screen

Organization of the Course

The course includes 9 modules.

Every module is accessible only if the previous one has been completed in all its parts.

Each module includes a self-assessment test: although they are mandatory and part of the learning process, these tests do not involve any evaluation: these tests can be repeated without limits: to access the next module a score equal to or higher than 80% of correct answers is required.

The course ends with a "final learning check" that is mandatory for all participants: this test duration is 30 minutes, consists of 24 questions and to overcome it you must answer exactly at least 75% of the questions (so at least 18 correct answers): if the test is not passed, you can try again 24 hours after the conclusion of the previous attempt.

Only after carrying out all the planned activities (following the video lessons, downloading the files, passing the self-learning tests and passing the "Final learning check") it will be possible to view and download in pdf format your Certificate (we suggest you to save the file in a safe place to provide it in the future).

We remind you that this course is mandatory, any failure to access the platform will have to be justified.
